How to write Letter of Inquiry for Seeking Grants

August 1st, 2012

'Letter of Inquiry' or LOI can be your first contact with a donor agency for raising funds for your NGO. It can be more relevant than a full proposal because if the Letter of Inquiry is found to be poorly written, no grantmaking organization will be interested to know anything about your NGO or your project. So as a first contact point, it is very important to develop a brief, well-researched and compelling letter seeking funding partnership from the prospective donor.

Most funding agencies prefer to receive an initial LOI or Letter of Inquiry from NGOs. They are never interested in accepting and reading full proposals. If you are straightaway sending a full proposal to a donor agency, it is referred to as an 'unsolicited proposal.' An 'unsolicited proposal' is a proposal that has not been solicited or requested by the donor agency, yet fund seekers end up sending it. An unsolicited proposal is never read and immediately rejected.

But this does not mean that donor agencies will not take interest in reading your proposals. They will but if there is a proper approach for it. The proper approach is to send the Letter of Inquiry first and then if the donor shows interest in it and requests for the proposal, you can submit a 'solicited proposal.'

So, how can one write a Letter of Inquiry? In general, a Letter of Inquiry should be brief and to-the-point with some basic information about the project and an indication of the budget. But along with that different donor agencies have different guidelines on the format, look and feel of the letter. It is best to read these guidelines carefully. Here, we will go through the guidelines of some major grantmaking foundations on how to submit the Letter of Inquiry for seeking grants from them.

- Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation
- Charles Stewart Mott Foundation
- Ford Foundation
- KIOS – The Finnish NGO Foundation for Human Rights
- MacArthur Foundation

Hola, muy interesante los aportes a las Ongs que en América Latina, especialmente en Colombia, laboramos bajo el enfoque de lo psicosocial con Grupos Marginados, y que en la actualidad no contamos con recursos económicos suficientes. Estamos en la tarea de buscar ayuda del exterior, ya que en nuestro país es muy complicado obtener ayudas estatales. Actualmente la Fundación inicio una labor con un proyecto piloto con personas habitantes de la calle, en dos partes: La primera una investigación psicosocial sobre la Marginalidad vista desde y con esta población, la Segunda crear un Centro Psicosocial Publico de Ayuda a estos. Se inicio creando un Centro Psicosocial publico de Ayuda, pero en forma ambulante por la falta de recursos en la obtención de un local y por la misma dinámica de las personas participantes. Cualquier entidad interesada en ayudar nos puede contactar en E-MAIL: joherfifundacionpsicosocial@hotmail.com , joherfi@hotmail.com
